Architecture of Being: Selected Poems Bruce Colbert

Bruce Colbert's powerful new poetry collection rests on realities and the art of seeing, tasting and being in this human chaos we call life. And with the muscular shoulders of Chicago, maybe the last great American city as much of his backdrop we are taken on an enduring emotional and spiritual quest. His "Architecture of Being" is a painful and profound journey of the heart. Nighthawks Stadium stocking cap pulled determinedly down above chilled pink fleshy faces almost young that herald hints of hurried make up and ageless eyes, brownish blond hair a frame to a Gdansk self portrait with nasal three flat dirty-carpeted accents And a toothy smile of cold white foamy resolve that sees this nocturnal instant crawling guiltless toward them across a damp mahogany bar in its reality. Bruce Colbert is an actor, filmmaker and author of "A Tree on the Rift," "Lombard Street" and "The Race Lost." His stories and poems have appeared in over twenty literary magazines. A new espionage novel will be released later this year.
