The elevator won't go to the tenth floor, someone is breaking into condos, and the well-heeled Ukrainian renter isn't paying the rent. Beth and Arnie have retired to the building where Beth's last rental unit is located, and Beth is through solving mysteries. But then, her renter is arrested for the murder of her neighbor who fell (was pushed?) from the tenth-story balcony, and the neighbor's grandchildren are left with only their wheelchair-ridden grandmother. Beth feels compelled to help out. Are Sylvester's psycho-catish behaviors providing clues? Is the renter actually the killer? Do the break-ins and elevator problem have anything to do with the murder? Even Arnie, who has always told Beth to keep her nose out of police business, gets involved—for the sake of the children.
