Not illustrated. 1897 Excerpt: ...to another square garden by the river-side, with a waterwork in the middle. Alloway. The gardens consist of forty-two acres, and the wood, with vistas cut through it, of 150 acres. On the right of the area is a spacious garden with a fine terrace and bowling-green, adorned with the largest evergreens you can see anywhere. To the south is the parterre, spacious, and finely adorned with statues and vases; and from this parterre to the River Forth runs a fine terrace, or avenue, from whence, and from the parterre, you have thirty-two different vistas, each ending on some remarkable seat or mountain: one of them shews you Stirling Castle at four miles distance; another, the Palace of Elphinstone, on the other side of the river; a third, the Castle of Clacmaning. In the middle of this long terrace is a basin of water like that of the Duke of Chandos, at Cannons, in the middle of which is the statue of Cain slaying Abel, and at the end of the river are a pair of pyramidal gates. The avenue to the east, through the wood, is prodigiously long and large, and between each vista, from the parterre, are wildernesses of trees for birds, and little grottos. Hopton. The parterre fronting the saloon is longer than that at Cannons, and like it, hath a large basin of water at bottom; it is also adorned with a multitude of statues, on pedestals, as at Cannons; but the views here are prodigiously more extensive. From the terrace to the north of this parterre is the finest view I ever saw anywhere. There are also several vistas from each of the many walks that run from this parterre. This fine palace and garden lies in the middle of a spacious park, well stocked with deer, and environed with a stone wall. Palace of Hamilton. A noble parterre adorned with statues, and lower, s...
