Aliyah trembles as her savior enters through the darkness and smoke fills the room...

As the head nurse of the ER, Aliyah has seen more than her fair share of emergencies. When she finds herself trapped in her own home ablaze, she is amazed by the sweet and handsome fireman that comes to her rescue. Someone so caring he goes back into the inferno just to save her dog from the fire, risking his own life in the process.

Days go by and she keeps thinking of the man who saved her until one day she bumps into him at the grocery store. She tries to thank him and offers to take him out for lunch but this fireman is full of surprises. He offers to cook her dinner instead while they get to know each other. She learns more about his past and how he was an orphan until a wealthy family adopted him, and how he decided to follow in his new father's footsteps and become a fireman.

They hit it off at dinner and realize they are so different, but there's a spark that keeps bringing them back together. She loves predictability and routine, while he loves living day to day with a little danger. The fireman shows Aliyah there is so much more to life, and that she should start really living. Everything starts moving very fast and while Aliyah thinks she is falling for him she still has a few doubts.

A terrible accident almost takes the life of her new love, and she swears that she can't be in a relationship where she's constantly fearing for her man's life. They break it off for good and she starts feeling very sick at work. A concerned colleague comes to her rescue, and gives her the bittersweet news that she is also pregnant...

Will love overcome all odds and bring them back together? Will her fireman sacrifice it all to be with her and make them one big happy family?
